Testing Program for U.S. Activated Carbons

Norit Americas Inc. has an extensive program to routinely test its food grade carbons against the FCC specifications and has done so for over twenty years. During that time, no product sample has failed to meet the FCC requirements for activated carbon.

Our testing program randomly selects individual lot samples of carbon based upon similar product groups (for example, carbons which only differ in particle size, but are identical in every other respect). Testing is done on a quarterly basis and encompasses about 1 to 2% of all lots produced. Given the continued success of the random testing program, we feel confident that these activated carbons fully meet the Food Chemicals Codex requirements. Results of these tests are available upon request.

Carbons included in the test program:
